Business Entity Comparison Chart

Entity	Organization and Ownership	Taxation of Profits and Losses
Sole proprietor, single-member LLC, and husband/wife business <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Schedule C (Form 1040), Profit or Loss From Business Schedule F (Form 1040), Profit or Loss From Farming Schedule SE (Form 1040), Self-Employment Tax IRS Pub. 334, Tax Guide for Small Business 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> One individual carrying on an unincorporated trade or business. A qualified joint venture whose only members are spouses may elect not to be taxed as a partnership and file as two sole proprietorships. An LLC may not make this election. Easiest business to organize with minimal legal restrictions. The entity does not exist apart from the owner. Business starts and ends based on engaging in and ending engagement in business. The owner has complete freedom over business decisions and is entitled to 100% of the profits. The owner is limited by his or her own ability to raise capital and obtain financing. Outside investors cannot be part owners. Transfer of ownership consists of selling the business assets. A single-member LLC is taxed as a sole proprietorship unless the election is made to be taxed as a corporation. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The owner is self-employed and pays self-employment (SE) tax on net profits. Net profits are subject to income tax in the year earned and cannot be deferred by retaining profits. Losses offset other income in year incurred, such as W-2 wages, interest, dividends, and capital gains. Exceptions: Losses cannot be used to offset income from activities subject to passive loss, at-risk loss, and hobby loss rules. Owner may qualify for the 20% qualified business income (QBI) deduction.
Partnership <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Form 1065, U.S. Return of Partnership Income IRS Pub. 541, Partnerships IRC Subchapter K, §701 through §761 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Two or more owners conducting an unincorporated trade or business. Easy to organize with minimal legal restrictions. Multi-member LLCs are taxed as partnerships, unless the election to be taxed as a corporation is made. No limitations on the number of partners or partner entities. More flexibility than a corporation in dividing up profits, losses, ownership of capital, and making special allocations to partners. Contributing property in exchange for a partnership interest is a tax-free event (except for the receipt of cash) and there is generally no tax when liquidating a partnership interest in exchange for property (unless the liquidation is in cash only). Getting out of a partnership may be more complicated than starting one. A partnership agreement can restrict selling or transferring of a partnership interest. A partnership can terminate if too much ownership is exchanged or liquidated in one year. State law may limit an LLC's life. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> The partnership pays no income tax. Profits pass through to partners for individual payment of tax. Tax to partners cannot be deferred by retaining business earnings. Pass-through items retain the same character to the partner as they had to the partnership. A general partner's distributive share of profits is subject to self-employment (SE) tax. Limited partners share of profits not subject to SE tax unless in the form of guaranteed payments. Payment for partner services to the partnership is not W-2 income, but may be guaranteed payments, profits, or special allocations. Losses flow through to partners and can be used to offset other income such as W-2 wages, interest, dividends, and capital gains. Exceptions: Losses cannot be used to offset income from activities subject to passive loss, at-risk loss, and hobby loss rules. Partner may qualify for the 20% qualified business income (QBI) deduction.
S corporation <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Form 1120-S, U.S. Income Tax Return for an S Corporation IRC Subchapter S, §1361 through §1379 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> A corporation that has elected to be taxed as an S corporation by filing Form 2553, Election by a Small Business Corporation. Ownership is through owning shares of stock. Limited to 100 shareholders. (Spouses and their estates and all members of a family, as defined in IRC section 1361(c)(1)(B), and their estates can be treated as one shareholder for this test.) Stock is limited to one class of stock with equal rights to distributions and liquidation proceeds. Shareholders are limited to individuals, estates, certain trusts, and certain charities. Corporations and certain partnerships are ineligible to own stock. Other ownership and organization issues are the same as a C corporation. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> An S corporation generally pays no tax. Profits flow through to the shareholders. Pass-through items retain the same character to the shareholder as they had to the corporation. Distributions are not subject to self-employment tax. Shareholders who perform services are paid as employees and income is reported on a W-2. Losses flow through to shareholders and may be used to offset other income, subject to passive, at-risk, and hobby loss exception rules. Shareholder may qualify for the 20% qualified business income (QBI) deduction.
C corporation <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Form 1120, U.S. Corporation Income Tax Return IRS Pub. 542, Corporations IRC Subchapter C, §301 through §385 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> A legal association carrying on a trade or business organized under state law. Ownership is through owning shares of stock, and there is no limit on number of shareholders, or type of taxpayer or entity. Forming a corporation may require complex and expensive legal procedures. Corporations must hold board meetings, shareholder meetings, and keep corporate minutes. Corporations are subject to federal and state regulations. The life of a corporation is perpetual. Transfers of ownership can be as easy as selling or inheriting stock. Liquidating a corporation is usually a taxable event, and contributions in exchange for stock may be taxable. Raising additional capital can be as easy as issuing new shares of stock. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Shareholders who perform services are paid as W-2 employees subject to payroll taxes and reporting rules. Reasonable wages must be paid and not inflated to reduce corporate tax liability. Net profits are subject to tax at the corporate rates. Profits distributed as dividends are taxed again on the shareholder's tax return. Tax to the shareholders can be deferred by retaining earnings for business purposes. Losses do not pass through to shareholders. Business losses must be carried over to a year with profits. Capital losses must be carried over to a year with capital gains. At-risk limitations, hobby loss, and passive loss rules do not apply.

Good Fit	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Businesses with significant exposure to liability.

Business Formalities

A common problem with a closely-held business is failure to adhere to business formalities. Trouble can occur when business and personal funds are intermingled, the business is not adequately capitalized, or reasonable compensation for services is not paid.

For example, separation of funds can be a key in preserving the liability protection of the "corporate veil." Courts can pierce the corporate veil if they find the corporation is an "alter ego" of the shareholder, which is likely to occur if shareholders pay personal expenses from the corporation checkbook or vice versa.

Transactions such as capital contributions or loans between the business and the owners can also be recharacterized by the IRS, creating unexpected negative tax consequences.

There are many events that occur during the year that can affect your tax situation. Preparation of your tax return involves summarizing transactions and events that occurred during the prior year. In most situations, treatment is firmly established at the time the transaction occurs. However, negative tax effects can be avoided by proper planning. Please contact us in advance if you have questions about the tax effects of a transaction or event, including the following:

- Pension or IRA distributions.
- Significant change in income or deductions.
- Job change.
- Marriage.
- Attainment of age 59½ or 72.
- Sale or purchase of a business.
- Sale or purchase of a residence or other real estate.
- Retirement.
- Notice from IRS or other revenue department.
- Divorce or separation.
- Self-employment.
- Charitable contributions of property in excess of $5,000.
